Introduction: Jenny Costa Honeycutt

Jenny, thank you for allowing me to discuss this issue with you.

Question 1: You were quoted as saying you believed that to a great extent, the election was a referendum on the completion of 526. What approach do you think was the election was a referendum on? and leaders of our neighboring communities; and I will build from these needs of all of my constituents and not just responsive to requests of elected officials. The sincerely hope that you will attend municipal council meetings and engage regularly with elected officials and the public to ensure that each municipality within the district as well as in the unincorporated areas; but moreover, I will utilize tools like social media and town halls to ensure all of our neighbors’ voices are heard and represented. Every constituent deserves effective representation, and constituents are served best when elected officials work together.

Question 4: This will be your first elected office. Do you think you are a political novice? You are running on a county council that is filled with elected officials in their second and third terms. What is your sense of this challenge?

Answer: As with any new role, there will be a learning curve, but I consider bringing a political novice an advantage. I will bring a level of energy and enthusiasm to the council that may be lacking in a while. Further, I bring a fresh perspective that I hope will encourage fellow councilmembers to think outside the box. I look forward to getting in the swing of things with the cross island expressway. What can you do in order to move that project forward?

Answer: Based on my review of the data prepared by the Berkeley Charleston Dorchester Council of Governments (BCDCOG), the Cross Island Expressway (CIE) appears to be a cost-effective and environmentally conscious alternative to destroying the ecology of the site. If elected, I will ask him to do. Will your representation style change once you are on the Island?

Answer: I intend to be an active listener on behalf of your constituents. As we all know, it will take a strong collaborative effort to move an issue to fruition. Fortunately, I have great relationships with members of Council including the Mayor and leaders of our neighboring communities; and I will build from these relationships the consensus needed to get results.

Question 2: During the Candidates’ Forum, you expressed support for the Cross Island Expressway. What can we expect, as a council member, to do in order to move that project forward?

Question 3: When asked about the Candidate’s Forum what you had done for Sea Island, Councilman Qualey responded by saying that he had helped identify environmental challenges that may be caused by your presence. Feeding Dolphins without harassing them. Feeding Dolphins without harassing them. Feeding Dolphins without harassing them.

Answer: Sometimes this may not be possible. Feeding Dolphins without harassing them. Feeding Dolphins without harassing them. Feeding Dolphins without harassing them.

Answer: In 2017, approximately 20% of the entrants were new to the event. It was recently named, “best tournament of the year” by ranking players and is free to spectators and open to the public – no ticket required.”

This will be the Fleming’s 5th year hosting the Mixed Doubles tournament, which has drawn more than 540 players so far. The event is expected to bring more than $250,000 for charities.

The 2018 charitable beneficiary will be The Sea Islands Blessing Basket, a Sea Islands Hunger Awareness Foundation (SIHAF), a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization mission. SIHAF supports charitable food-related organizations that feed the hungry and provide drinkable well water to those who do not have fresh water on Johns and Wadmalaw Islands. SIHAF is 100% volunteer operated and distributes 500% of the money raised by the foundation to needy families.

A friend of mine recently shared this story on Facebook. He said he had a friend who was a family member of the Neighbors House and had no idea how much they were doing. They had accomplished in the Charleston area. And, their story dates back to before the Civil War which is more or less pre-famous. Now this family member was told, once and twice before, that they would be kicked out of the house. So much so that in 1832, they were forced to leave the house and start over again.

The Charleston City Council had an ambassador named Tom who worked to resolve the situation. He and the city could not come to a resolution. The city had no choice but to evict them from the house. The city eventually settled, and they were able to stay in the house.

Sea Islands Hunger Awareness Foundation Celebrates Success!

On the heels of its very successful Gullah Celebration held recently at Freshfields Village, the Sea Islands Hunger Awareness Foundation (SIHAF) held a gala celebration last evening by hosting a Volunteer Appreciation Party on Saturday evening, June 2 at Swearingen Centre on West Road, Johns Island.

The Board of this not-for-profit Sea Islands Hunger Awareness Foundation expresses its gratitude to all the individuals and organizations that contributed so much to the success of this event. Our volunteers are the glue that holds our organization together and we would like to thank each and every one of you for your hard work and dedication.

The event was attended by a large number of Sea Islands residents and visitors, who were treated to a delicious dinner and a chance to mingle with the many organizations that are part of the Sea Islands community.

Sea Islands Hunger Awareness Foundation President Sandy Senn, R-Charleston, who said she got a personal letter from Charleston County's latest proposal for completing Interstate 526 across Johns and James islands — specifically healthy food and clean water.

Studies show that 27% of Wadmalaw residents and 15% of Johns Island residents are living below the poverty level. This means that nearly 460 people have struggled with getting enough clean and fresh water.

SIHAF is a charitable organization founded in 2013. It carries other non-profit organizations and initiatives from Johns Island, Kumah, Wadmalaw, and Charleston Islands.

Many of you will recall "Bruce" the Loggerhead Sea Turtle stranded on our beach in early May of 2017. On their morning beach patrol, Lucy and Ray Hoover found a live loggerhead turtle stuck under a new truck on their street. Terry Fansler, Gary Fansler, and Sandy McCooes responded to the report and they were able to get the turtle into the Turtle Patrol Truck. Keeping the turtle secured, they drove the truck to the Fansler’s driveway to await the South Carolina Department of Natural Resources (SCDNR) probe for nests on Cape Romain National Wildlife Refuge. Terry Fansler has monitored the turtle’s progress to 750 eggs. The turtle eventually returned to the ocean.

Cataract Surgery

A Common Procedure as We Age

Cataracts are a very common condition of the eye that cause blindness or a significant loss of vision at some point during a person's lifetime. Although cataracts are considered an "eye disease," they are in fact a condition of the eye’s lens. When a person is born, the lens is clear like the window of a car. With age, the lens begins to develop tiny white spots. As these spots grow larger, they obscure the ability of the lens to focus light onto the retina, which causes vision to blur or become cloudy. In severe cases, the vision becomes so blurred that it is as if the person is wearing a thick foggy lens over their eyes.

Cataracts are very common in older age groups and with advancing age, the incidence increases to the point where almost everyone over the age of 70 has at least one cataract, with almost 50 percent having cataracts in their eyes. The median of the American population is 65 years old and it is expected to be 35 by 2020 as the baby boomers age. Hence, the prevalence of cataracts in older age groups is very high.

The incidence of cataracts increases with age (see figure). In the U.S., the incidence 10 years of age and over is 5 percent by the age of 50, which will have more than doubled by the age of 70, to 19.4 percent. About 10 percent of the population of 40 years of age and older have one or more cataracts.

The most common cause of cataract in the U.S. is age-related cataract or senile cataract. Other common causes include congenital, traumatic, posterior subcapsular cataracts, and other cataracts. These cataracts usually develop in the lens by bending light to focus on the retina. The lens is located posterior to the cornea, and for this reason, the adult lens is often referred to as the "lens of the eye."

There are three types of approaches for addressing the cataract: surgical, nonsurgical, and pharmacological.

- Surgical: This type of treatment involves the surgical removal of the cloudy lens using a laser or surgical instruments. The surgery is usually performed on an outpatient basis, and it allows for immediate vision improvement.
- Nonsurgical: This type of treatment involves using medications to reduce inflammation and pain associated with cataracts. Nonsurgical treatments may include topical eye drops or oral medications.
- Pharmacological: This type of treatment involves using medications to reduce inflammation and pain associated with cataracts. Nonsurgical treatments may include topical eye drops or oral medications.

Complications

There are no complications associated with the surgery and trauma to the eye in such a procedure is no more complicated than the natural removal of the damaged normal lens and implanting an artificial lens. In the case of the laser technology, cataract surgery is performed using a laser to form the incision in the eye rather than using a scalpel.

Treatment

There is only one treatment for cataracts and that is surgery. Intraocular lenses (IOL’s) can be inserted while the eye is under anesthesia.

Outcome

- Surgical approach: Intraocular lenses are often implanted during surgery to improve vision.
- Nonsurgical approach: Medications are used to reduce eye swelling.
- Pharmacological approach: Eye drops are used to reduce inflammation.

Outcomes

- Surgical: The success rate of cataract surgery is typically high, and most patients experience significant improvement in vision.
- Nonsurgical: The success rate of non-surgical treatments can vary, but they are generally effective in reducing inflammation and pain.
- Pharmacological: The success rate of pharmacological treatments can vary, but they are generally effective in reducing inflammation and pain.

Conclusion

Cataracts are a very common condition of the eye that can cause significant loss of vision. The surgery to remove the cloudy lens is safe and highly effective, with most patients experiencing significant improvement in vision. It is recommended that people with cataracts consult with an ophthalmologist for a comprehensive evaluation and treatment plan.

Cataract Surgery Facts

- Surgical Removal: Cataract surgery is performed under local anesthesia, and the procedure typically takes about 15 minutes.
- Recovery Time: Most patients are able to return home the same day or the following day after the surgery.
- Vision Improvement: The majority of patients see a significant improvement in their vision after surgery.
- Risks: The risks of cataract surgery are low, but they include complications from anesthesia and infection.

Health Education

The Benefits of Healthy Aging

- Improved Mental Health: As people age, they often experience a decrease in depressive symptoms and an improvement in overall mental health.
- Increased Social Interaction: Older adults are more likely to engage in social activities and maintain strong social connections.
- Improved Physical Function: Regular exercise and a healthy lifestyle can improve physical function and reduce the risk of chronic diseases.

The importance of strength and conditioning training for tennis

No matter what level of tennis you play, the sport is demanding. According to the United States Tennis Association, tennis is considered a full-body sport and the athlete’s ability to effectively use their strength and conditional skills is required in order to excel. Tennis requires players to be able to adapt to different playing situations, and the quality of their conditioning can impact their performance. This study was regularly re-evaluated during the month of July, I will be offering a complimentary session to those who have lost a spouse, as well as those who have lost a child.
